

A Look Back at Streaming in 2019

Hours Watched and Sentiment from Twitch, Mixer and YouTube Live Sources

- Fortnite was still at the top of the video game industry as fans around the world tuned in to Epic's live stream of a black hole, eagerly awaiting what the next version of Fortnite would become.
- EA's Apex Legends had a big push to compete with Fortnite and even brought in Ninja to stream during launch week to promote the game and attract viewership.
- An instant fan favorite, Sekiro: Shadows Die Twice is enjoyable to play just as it was to watch others play through the difficulty of the game and share in that Dark Souls type experience.
- With the launch of Pokémon Sword and Shield, fans were eager to witness new Pokémon being discovered and explore a new Pokémon region, even with the smaller count of Pokémon this time around.
- Each year Call of Duty attracts its core player base to engage in the annual FPS, Call of Duty Modern Warfare was no different as players still enjoyed Activision's formula in the FPS genre.

Streaming Leaderboard

Top 10 Streamed Games Ranked by Hours Watched

Top Video Games Moments

Hours Watched, Chat Messages and Sentiment from Streams

Top 10 New Releases

Hours Watched and Chat Messages Over Time for the First Three Months Following a Game's Launch

